

Goodbye Imran

So this Monday's session was a very emotional session for me at Monday club. It was our last session of the year and, also, our last session with Imran as our group leader!

Imran has been hassling me for a while to make him famous and now his time has come!

Imran was an awesome group leader, he always brought me bananas every week, and a kinder surprise every now and again. He knew exactly what I liked and what really irritated me, but most of all, he took time to actually understand me. Not once did he try to control me, which I respect him the most for. To be honest, he realised there was no point trying to control me - as I would just win every battle! 😊

Monday nights won't be the same without you bro! I hope you liked your present to go up in your office!

I don't usually get too upset about people leaving but Imran is someone that I will really miss, and I got upset at the thought of him not being there; someone I can wind up and fight with!

The Christmas break is always my biggest challenge of the year – as once again, routine gets taken away. COVID has changed my routine so much this last year that I'm not ready for it to all change again.

RFA keeps me going each week, knowing I have people that understand me and who I can talk to. As it was our last session was really tough for me to handle, but my keyworker came up with a plan to join the Tuesday AU Struck club this week, so it is one extra week for me to have support for. This has helped me an awful lot and I am excited to write about going to a different club and seeing a few familiar faces again!

Good Luck Bro!
You are a G!!!
